

Lyles Center welcomes new home

The Lyles Center for Innovation and Entrepreneurship has a new, more spacious home on the second floor of the recently opened Student Recreation Center adjacent to the Save Mart Center.

The Lyles Center is a unique partnership among students, faculty and community that in just 10 years has matured to stand eighth among all the nation's universities in the strength of its programs.

At the grand opening on April 19, President John Welty said, "The Lyles Center's extensive work with local inventors and entrepreneurs helps keep their ideas in the region, where they can benefit the local economy."

Because of the center's collaboration with venture capitalists, three funds will begin operating out of the Lyles Center this summer to help transform good ideas into productive businesses.
